Panasonic Toughbooks Highlight New Products

MECHANICSBURG, PA, November 30, 2010 - - South Central Pennsylvania based Digital Planet announced today that they entered into several agreements to distribute mobile computing hardware and related equipment to meet the increasing demand for rugged, mobile computers for field use. Digital Planet expanded its product offering to assist businesses and organizations who desire to be in mobile and wireless environment.

“Many of our customers desire to have a single point of contact for all of their technology needs,” states Rick Gurba, President. Gurba continues “this is one of several planned steps we will take to enhance our product and service offering which will lead to a total turnkey solution for our clients. Customers can choose to pay cash or finance the total cost of the project through an all-inclusive, multi-year contract.”

New manufacturers now available include the Panasonic Toughbook series of computers, Gamber Johnson vehicle docking stations and other related accessories to outfit an individual, vehicle, trailer or field station. Product information is available by completing the sales form on our web site at www.digitalplanetinc.com/salesform.aspx.
